Washington was selected as one of the eight teams to participate in the NWSL’s inaugural season in 2013. In December 2012, the team’s name was announced as the Washington Spirit. Bill Lynch was the founding owner of the Spirit, and owned a majority share of the team until selling a majority share of the team to tech executive Steve Baldwin in late 2018.

Since their start in the NWSL, the Spirit have participated in all seven seasons of the league, with their best results coming during the 2016 season, where they reached the final against Western New York Flash.

The Spirit played their first-ever game at Audi Field on August 25, 2018, and set a then-record attendance of 7,976 fans. The Spirit returned to Audi Field 364 days later on August 24, 2019, where the club hosted a record 19,871 fans in a 2-1 win over the Orlando Pride.

The Spirit has three home stadiums, the Maryland SoccerPlex, Audi Field and Segra Field. All three venues will be used for the Spirit to play home games throughout the NWSL season.
Steve Baldwin joined the Washington Spirit in early 2019 after purchasing a majority share of the club from founding owner Bill Lynch. Since then, he’s become a leader within NWSL ownership, diligently working to improve the Spirit and the League as a whole.

From the beginning, one of Baldwin’s main priorities has been to transform the experience players have with the team. Players have enjoyed an expanded technical and medical staff as well as improved travel conditions, housing and transportation. On the field, Baldwin made significant additional investments in human performance and video analysis technologies to enhance the development of players.

Baldwin understands that the fans are an integral part of what he is trying to accomplish for the club. He interacts with fans every chance he gets - at games, community events and via email. He takes to heart what people who support the Spirit have to say. The club saw increased fan engagement with the additions of theme nights, in-stadium gear stores and an increased community presence. The Spirit played two games at Audi Field in 2019, setting the club’s attendance record with 19,871 fans against the Orlando Pride on August 24, 2019.

In 2019, Baldwin secured a deal that will see the Spirit play four games at three different venues in 2020, with the club splitting time between Audi Field, Segra Field and the Maryland SoccerPlex. In 2021, the team will play seven games at Audi Field and five games at Segra Field. Baldwin believes that the Spirit should play on the largest stage, and his ultimate goal is to have the team playing 10 or more games annually at Audi Field beginning in 2022.

Baldwin has spent the past 31 years as a serial entrepreneur, building and selling three businesses to date. His largest firm, Apptis, had more than 1600 employees and over $800 million in revenue. He currently owns two IT businesses in Qbase and Finch Computing. Qbase is an IT services business with approximately 400 employees. Finch Computing (a subsidiary of Qbase) is a predictive analytics software technology business with approximately 50 employees and 30 patents in high-performance computing, natural language processing, data modeling, and analytics.

Baldwin grew up in Gaithersburg, MD and graduated from the University of Maryland, College Park.
Bill Lynch is a founding member of the National Women’s Soccer League (NWSL), as he established the formation of the Washington Spirit alongside seven other teams in 2012. Lynch was the majority owner of the Washington Spirit until 2018, when he sold a majority share of the team to Steve Baldwin.

In a message to fans in 2013, Lynch committed to, “building sustainable teams as part of the NWSL to ensure the women have a league with real longevity.” Outside of the Spirit, Lynch is the co-Founder, President and COO of ProChain Solutions, a Project Management Solutions company founded in 1996. ProChain Solutions is a premier implementer of solutions based on the “Critical Chain” approach with thousands of clients, many in the Global 500. Lynch has spent nearly twenty-five years creating breakthrough process improvements and providing innovative integrated solutions for product development as well as project and resource management.

Lynch also co-authored a best-selling Nonfiction book titled “The Project Manifesto Transforming Your Life and Work with Critical Chain Values.”

Lynch earned an undergraduate degree in electrical engineering and graduate degrees in liberal arts and logistics management.

The Washington Spirit doesn’t have one home stadium, but three: Maryland SoccerPlex, Audi Field and Segra Field.

MARYLAND SOCCERPLEX

The Maryland SoccerPlex, located in Germantown, Maryland, has been the Spirit’s home venue since the NWSL’s inaugural season in 2013, with a capacity of 5,000 people.

AUDI FIELD

In 2018, the Spirit coordinated with D.C. United to start playing some home matches at Audi Field, located in Buzzard Point, Washington DC. Audi Field has a capacity of 20,000 people, and the team played their first-ever game there on August 25, 2018. A year later, on August 24, 2019, the team played again at Audi Field, where they hosted a club record of 19,871 fans in attendance.

SEGRA FIELD

In November 2019, the Spirit announced that they added their third home stadium: Segra Field, which is located in Leesburg, Virginia, and has a capacity of 5,000. The Spirit announced that they would split the team’s home games between the three venues in the upcoming season.
